University Intellectual Property: A Source of Finance and Impact

by Graham Richards

Universities are being forced to look beyond their traditional roles of teaching and doing original research. The driver is above all financial pressure as governments and fee payers seek to limit their contributions. Attention is increasingly being focused on the exploitation of intellectual property generated by academics, but the situation is complex. What constitutes intellectual property? Who owns it? How can it best be exploited? This book aims to answer these questions using the experiences of practitioners in the area.

Price: £30.00

ISBN: 9780857192325 Pub date: June 2012

eBooks

2011 really was 'The Year of the eBook' with sales and interest in eBooks and eReaders taking off massively and predictions that growth is only set to continue into 2012 and beyond. Harriman House has made sure that we are completely up-to-date with all the developments in the digital world and that we are at the forefront of this radical change to the publishing industry.

We now have almost our entire backlist converted to eBook format and publish all new titles simultaneously in both print and eBook format. We were also one of the first publishers to offer eBook editions of our titles to any customers who had purchased the print copies of certain titles published this year and we are now rolling this out to include all of our titles, so that readers can benefit from both the eBook and hard copy versions. Getting the eBook edition is quick and easy, with customers answering questions to verify that they have a print copy of the book and so qualify for a free eBook edition. We think that this offers a great deal to customers, promotes the take up of eBooks and also allows us to engage directly with customers even if they have purchased the print copy of the book from elsewhere.

Additionally we have – where relevant – started offering eBook versions of single chapters for some of our books to allow readers to buy the content that covers their particular need and will continue to do this where appropriate in the coming months.

In 2012, we will also be adding to our successful eBook-only range. We have newly commissioned titles in our Harriman Instant Series such as The Tangled World from Gerald Ashley and Terry Lloyd (www.harriman-house.com/tangledworld) and the forthcoming Serious Money (www.harriman-house.com/seriousmoney), plus a range of classic texts including John Maynard Keynes' The Economic Consequences of the Peace (www.harriman-house.com/economicconsequencesofthepeace).

Distributed Titles

We offer a trade sales and distribution solution for books that we feel would complement our existing list – but they don't have to be finance-related. We are in direct contact with the head buyers in the trade and also have dedicated City reps. Titles that we currently run this service for are shown below. If you would like more information, or to discuss adding your book(s) to this service, please email mhunt@harriman-house.com or call 01730 233874.

Corporate Services

Harriman House Corporate Services

Harriman House provides an extensive range of corporate publishing solutions, from bespoke editions of our titles – including eBooks – to contract publishing and the provision of online and video content. Customised editions of our titles can include both modified content and unique branded cover designs, thus providing our clients with high quality marketing and promotional products. As part of the service we can also provide individual fulfilment of the products to the end customer, whether physical or digital.

We also work with clients to develop fully bespoke products to match their requirements – from the development of the initial concept through to the commissioning of the content, design, production, marketing and distribution.

Alongside our traditional publishing operation we also provide online educational content which can be tailored to suit our client's requirements. We are also expanding our eBook publishing operation and developing a number of video, DVD and app products that are ideally suited for corporate use.

For more information on our corporate publishing services please call Myles Hunt on +44 (0)1730 233874 or email mhunt@harriman-house.com.

Brightword Publishing produces print books, kits and digital products aimed at a small business and start-up audience, providing high quality information from high-profile experts in an accessible and approachable way.

At Brightword we are looking to create innovative products and work with authors and corporate partners to provide start-ups with the information they need to succeed. The world of publishing is changing fast and at Brightword we are looking to be at the forefront of that change – working in partnership with authors to create great products and make the most of the developing technologies. Whilst we create print editions of many of our titles we also produce eBook only titles and are working on a number of apps and enhanced eBooks – bringing in video and interactive elements.
